Maintenance procedures for stoneware objects by Laboratorio Pesaro

All tableware objects produced by Laboratorio Pesaro are ideal for microwave cooking, do not absorb fat and liquid, resist to all cooking condiments and can be washed in a dishwasher.

They are produced in stoneware, a ceramic mixture fired at high temperature (1230 ° C) with the technique of single-firing and developed with an exclusive composition of selected clays and minerals. Laboratorio Pesaro, in addition to the mixture, also produces enamels based on its own formulas ensuring strict control on raw materials and a range of colours unique to the market.

With the technique of single-firing at high temperature it is expected that the mixture of ceramic combines at high temperature with the enamel vitrifying so to make the surface perfectly hygienic and resistant to abrasion and to the attack of acid substances.

The glazed surface is thus sometimes harder than cutlery steel and therefore any traces left by the same or spots of particularly resistant food are eliminated using the treatments listed below in order to "force".

1) CIF Ammoniacal (or equivalent detergents)

- a) Apply a few drops of the substance directly on the piece and rub with a cotton cloth the areas with patches and / or signs.
- b) Allow the piece to dry for several minutes.
- c) Rinse the piece with warm water.

2) Normal bleach (concentration of HCl: 10%)

- a) Immerse the piece in a 50% solution of soapy water and normal bleach I.
- b) Allow to set the piece for several minutes.
- c) Rinse the piece with warm water.

3) Strong bleach (HCl concentration: 30-33%)

- a) Apply a few drops of the substance directly on the piece and rub with a cotton cloth the areas with patches and / or signs: we recommend the use of rubber gloves.
- b) Allow the piece to dry for no more than 5 minutes.
- c) Rinse thoroughly and repeatedly the piece with warm water.
